Conclusion Yesterday's Proceedings RECONSTRUCTION.

SENATE.—After our report closed — Mr. Morrall (Me.) made a brief argument. advocating the right of General Ames to his seat. Mr. M. alluded to some remarks of Mr. Davis,

Mr. Davis stated that G n. Ames was elected not altogether by his own power, but by the power of the President of the United States; and if a man was elected not acceptable to the President or Congress, he would not be ad-Mr. Morrill said the Senator from Kentucky was not acceptable to the President, yet he occupied his seat here by the grace of God. [Laugh-

Mr. Davis:-Yes; but the grace of God is not as great in Mississippi as it is in Kentucky. Mr. Morril.—And yet the Senator and his colleague used to get up here during the war and complain of the military tyranny in Ken-

Mr. Davis .- Yes; when the military were in Kentucky they tyrannized and dominated over the liberties of the people of Kentucky, just as they have since in Mississippi and the other Southern States.

Mr. Morrill.-But since the war is over the laws are now supreme in both Kentucky and Mr. Davis .- The army is supreme in Mississippi.

Mr. Morrill.—The Legislature of Mississippi is tree to act. Mr. Saulsbury .- As an evidence of that, look at Georgia, which you have reconstructed three times, and which is not yet reconstructed and if the Legislature of Mississippi does anything that is displeasing to the President or to Congress, your rod of reconstruction will be again stretched over it, just as it has been over Geor-Mr. Morrill.-That would apply just as well to Delaware. Mr. Saulsbury.—I know you have the physi-cal power, but if the State of Delaware was your physical equal, I would advise her, and her people would hurl back every man of you who attempted to exercise unlawful authority Mr. Morrill.-I trust the day is far distant when the United States will array itself against the State of Delaware. [Great laughter.] Mr. Saulsbury.—The day has been when it rrayed itself against the State of Delawarewhen you sent your military in and took possession of the State, put a military Governor over as, and sent a man to Congress who was not the choice of the people, and when I, a Senator of the United States, was not allowed to vote in the town in which I was born. Mr. Thurman then took the floor, and again

HOUSE .- After our report closed-The case of Mr. Conner, elected to the House of Representatives from the Second District of Texas, was discussed at great length, after which the previous question was demanded and seconded, and the question was first taken upon the amendment of Mr. Shanks, that Mr. Connor be not sworn in, but that his case be referred to the Committee on Elections. After the vote was taken riva roce, the Speaker decided the amendment was defeated. Mr. Butler demanded the yeas and nays, but only twenty-one members (not a sufficient number) rose to second the demand. The resolution, as reported by Mr. Paine, was then adopted, and the members elect advanced to the Speaker's desk and were sworn in. Mr. Orth, then rising to a privileged question, asked and obtained permission for Mr. Connor to make a personal explanation. MR. CONNOR'S EXPLANATION. Mr. Connor said that during the canvass in Northern Texas it was proclaimed that it was no Democrat would be admitted to Congress from the Southern States; that the gentleman from Massachusetts controlled Congress, and it was easy to enlist this House against any Demo-crat. He told the people of his district that he did not believe the people of his district had elected him, and the House had just vindicated their choice and shown that he was not mistaken in his opinion of Congress. With regard to the opposition of Mr. Shanks, it was due to say that his (Connor's) family, in Indiana, were all Re-publicans, and some of them had great influence in the party. Because Mr. Shanks had appointed him to the Naval Academy, he (Shanks) supposed that he could dictate the speaker's action. His (Connor's) father had opposed Mr. Shanks in his political course, and this might account for his opposition. As to the charges against him, all he would say was, that he would ask a committee to investigate his conjuct. The gentleman from Massachusetts, he believed, claimed great influence in this House but he thought that gentleman had mistaken his vocation; that he would appear better as a low comedian. The Speaker reminded Mr. Connor that such remarks were not in order. Mr. Connor.—I take them back. Mr. Connor then said he had affidavits from all the witnesses who testified, averring that, they were not suborned.

Mr. Shanks denied that anything Mr. Connor's father had done in relation to him had any influence in this case. The gentleman had no told this House yet that he was not dismissed from the Naval Academy for his worthlessness, and I say to this House now that he is utterly worthless. The Speaker called Mr. Shanks to order, and reminded him that language that was parliamentary an hour ago was not parliamentary at this time, as Mr. Connor was now a member of the House. Mr. Shanks .- Then I beg pardon of the House. but not of the gentleman.

On motion of Mr. Schenck, the House resolved into Committee of the Whole, and resumed consideration of the tariif bill.

Mr. Schenck addressed the committee in favor of the bill, and reviewed the speeches that had been made for and against it during the course of the debate. He said he was in favor of the most enlarged free trade between the States, and of removing all burdens that would prevent freedom of traffic between one State and another, but he was not in favor of that sort of free trade which prevailed in France, Belgium. and England, and which had been up as models for this country. There was a vast difference between this country and the countries of Europe. With our vast area of territory we had all the most valuable varieties of soil and climate, and could produce everything in such bundance that we could have all we wanted and live independent of the world. At the conclusion of Mr. Schenck's speech the committee rose.

Mr. Logan, of Ill., introduced a bill to incorporate the Irish Colonization Society. Referred to the Committee on Public Lands. The House then, at 5 o'clock, adjourned. ....

SUBTERRANEAN LAKES .- In connection with a notice of the subterranean pond supposed to exist at Worcester, Mass., the Lawrence Amerexist at Worcester, Mass., the Lawrence American makes the annexed statement:—In Stockton, Cal., and immediately around it, an abundant supply of good water can be had anywhere by boring down a dozen feet with a common angur with a long handle. Picnic parties carry a pump and stand, lead pipe and an auger as a part of the required articles for the day. But a very short time is expended in obtaining But a very short time is expended in obtaining water. The fire reservoirs have no bottoms and require no filling, the water coming in freely as soon as they are dug. It was necessary to change the place of burnal first selected in the town, the water penetrating the graves and partially filling them. Yet there is no healthier place than that locality in that or any other State. An artesian well was sunk 1,200 feet in 1865, and ever since has thrown up a solid column of water ten feet above the suaface of the ground. Some thirty or forty miles from Stockton there is a large tract called "float hand" which moves on the surface, probably a law, several hundred feet at times. Hundreds of cattle graze upon it with perfect safety. It is supposed to have been formed much as the Worcester land. There are several pieces of such ground in different countries of Europe.

Snielde and Attempted Murder in Bos-ton. The Boston correspondence of the New York Herald of the 29th instant has the following:—A most sorrowful tragedy occurred in Howard street, in this city, this morning, produced by love, deep remorse and bitter revenge. The girl, Mary E. Jones, is petite in stature, with flashing black eyes, long and waving hair, and a smile or a blush gives pleasant expression to her pretty face. Her lover was one "Jake" Hickman, a well-known attache of the Howard Athenaeum. For a long time they have loved each other; but. For a long time they have loved each other; but, for a long time they have loved each other; but, for some reason or another, just as these things will sometime happen, Hickman has allowed his affection to cool down, and has not of late been so attentive to Mary as she demanded and expected. This fairly broke her heart. So last evening she called several times at his hotel, the Florence House, No. 29 Howard street, to see her lover, but failed to do so. She was repeatedly informed that he was not in that he was repeatedly informed that he was not in—that he was not ever in the city. But this she believed not, and even as late as one o'clock last night she went again to the hotel, and not being able to gain admission threw herself down on the steps When the inmates of the house were astir this morning she managed, through one of her own sex, to gain admission, when she rushed frantically to her lover's room. It was closely locked. No answer came to her loud and oft repeated demands for admission. Then she became frantic, paced the long hallway to and fro like a maniac, begging only to see her lover for one second—one second was all she desired, for with the weapon in her hand this was enough for her purpose. She simply wanted his life and was using every means in her power to get it, but she was foiled and failed. Then, after a minute's calmness and cool reflection, she deliberately entered the bath room, an apartment adjoining t' e room of her lover, and taking the pistol, the first shot of which she designed for her lover, she placed it at her left breast and fired, the ball entering her chest just below the left nipple. The report aroused the inmates of the house, and when they reached her she was lying on the floor and blood was flowing from her breast in a dark and fotal stream. fatal stream. A carriage was at once secured, when she was taken to the City Hospital, where

FULL PARTICULARS of the fatal duel between the Duke de Montpensier and Prince Henri de Fourbon, near Madrid, have come to hand by mail. The encounter took place in the open country, in a field about 200 metres distant from the little town of Alcoroon. On the morning of the 12th the Duke de Montpensier, accompanied by his seconds, repaired to this spot; the Prince de Bourbon was also promptly on time with seconds and surgeon. The weapons chosen were pistols, and, according to Continental fashion, ots were drawn as to which of the champions should fire first. The toss was won by Don Henri. Two shots at ten metres were exchanged without effect; two more at nine metres with like result. The combatants were then placed at eight metres (say twenty-four paces). Don Henri fired and missed, and the next instant fell stone dead, his skull pierced by the Duke de Montpensier's bullet. It is told that the Prince was very desirous, in accordance with his republican ideas, of finding an American wife. His friends were negotiating in a mar-riage between him and a Western heiress, and when about to leave Paris last summer for Madrid, he called upon a Boston lady who had promised to make up the match, and said, putting his finger on his forehead:—"Miss must not refuse any other offer for me, for I have a presentment that before very long a bullet will cure the fevers of this poor ardent brain. I am so convinced that a violent death stares me in the face, as to beg you will transfer your friendship to my poor little girl, whom I have been obliged to leave in a convent in the Faubourg St. Germain." Prince Henri de Bourbon was in his forty-fourth year, a widower and leaves four children.

The "Eau de Nil," a new color, has been produced in Paris. It is a delicate mixture of gray and green, shot with silver, which is said at every movement of the body to give to the robe "the aspect of flowing water." A chap advertises in the Elmira Gazette that he is desirous to "room and board" with some respectable widow lady in that city. At last accounts he had not been overrun with ap plications from respectacle widow ladies. 82 One of the greatest proofs of friendship that one woman can bestow on another, says the Saturday Review, is to give her the pattern of some unhackneyed, unpurchasable article of De you feel weak, debilitated, easily tired? Does a little extra exertion produce palpitation of the heart? Does your liver, or urinary organs, or your kidneys, frequently get out of order? Is your urine sometimes thick, milky or flocky, or is it ropy on settling? Or does a thick skum rise to the top? Or is a sediment at the bottom after it has stood awhile? Do you have spells of short breathing or dyspepsia? Are your bowels constipated? Do you have spells of fainting, or rushes of blood to the head? Is your memory impaired? Is your mind constantly dwelling on this subject? Do you feel dull, listless, moping, tired of company, of life? Do you wish to be left alone, to get away from everybody? Does any little thing make you start or jump? Is your sleep broken or restless? Is the lustre of your eye as brilliant? The bloom on your cheek as bright? Do you enjoy yourself in society as well? Do you pursue your business with the same energy? Do you feel as much confidence in yourself? Are your spirits dull and flagging, given to fits of melancholy? If so, do not lay it to your liver or dyspepsia. Have you restless nights? Your back weak, your kneeweak, and have but little appetite, and you at ribute this to dyspepsia or liver-complaint?

Now, reader, self-abuse, venereal diseases badly cured, and sexual excesses, are all capable of producing a weakness of the generative organs. The organs of generation, when in perfect health, make the man. Did you ever think that those bold, defiant, energetic, persevering, successful business men are always those whose generative organs are in perfect health? You never hear such men complain of being melaneholy, of nervousness, of palpitation of the heart. They are never afraid they cannot succeed in business; they don't become sad au discouraged; they are always polite and pleasant in the company of ladies, and look you and them right in the face-none of your downcast looks or any other meanness about them. I do not mean those who keep the organs inflated by running to excess. These will not only ruin their constitutions, but alse those they do business with or for,
